A KPI is a performance measure that effectively monitors retail processes. These measures are monitored by retailers to enable them to increase their profits by identifying consumer habits or barriers during the purchasing process. Facilitating access to this information allows retail managers to better understand what works or does not work in the sales funnel. The retail industry has the ...

At Tesco they re-branded it as “Steering wheel” ... (and I’d be careful with KPI term, as it was explained, not all metrics are actually KPIs). On this step you need to come up with indicators that your team will use to measure the success/failure in the execution of the strategy. The best option is to have leading and lagging metric aligned with each business goal you have. Normally ...
